

DEPARTMENT OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL

DAVID Y. IGE
GOVERNOR

RUSSELL A. SUZUKI
ATTORNEY GENERAL

For Immediate Release
July 23, 2018

News Release 2018-44

HAWAII JOINS COALITION OF ATTORNEYS GENERAL TO PROTECT DREAMERS AND PRESERVE DACA

Amicus Brief in Texas v. U.S. Follows Lawsuits to Protect DACA, in which AGs Secured Preliminary Injunctions Blocking DACA Rescission

HONOLULU – Attorney General Russell Suzuki – part of a coalition of 20 Attorneys General – filed an amicus brief seeking to protect Deferred Action for Early Childhood Arrivals (DACA) grantees.

The brief was filed in Texas v. United States, a case being heard in the District Court for the Southern District of Texas, in which certain states are challenging the lawfulness of the DACA program. The brief was led by the Attorneys General of New York and California, and was joined by the Attorneys General of Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Virginia, Vermont, Washington, and the District of Columbia.

The brief filed by the Attorneys General argues that the Texas plaintiffs cannot make the legal showing required to obtain a preliminary injunction, and that the requested preliminary injunction should not be granted because it would conflict with the two existing preliminary injunctions issued by courts in the Northern District of California and the Eastern District of New York.

Specifically, the brief argues that the Texas plaintiffs cannot show a likelihood of success on the merits or that they will be irreparably harmed if DACA is not enjoined; and that the balance of the equities and the public interest weigh against granting the Texas plaintiffs' requested preliminary injunction.

As the Attorneys General detail in their brief and prior lawsuits in defense of DACA, rescinding DACA wouldn't just devastate the lives of the grantees who rely on the program; it would also harm communities, employers, and educational institutions that depend on the contributions of the DACA grantees, including state employers and state institutions -- as two district courts have already concluded, noting that the States would suffer “staggering” and “irreversible” economic and social harms.

The loss of work authorization by DACA grantees would deprive the amici States of highly qualified employees, including faculty at state universities, nurses, information technology specialists, and public safety officers. State-run educational institutions would lose students and revenue, hindering their ability to promote critical programming. Additionally, state and local governments would lose out on the hundreds of millions of dollars in state and local taxes that DACA grantees pay each year. According to CITATION, without DACA, the Gross Domestic Product would be $460.3 billion less over the next decade, while Social Security and Medicaid tax receipts would drop $24.6 billion.

“As two district courts have now found, ending DACA would injure the amici States as employers, providers of health services, and proprietors of public universities. It would also cause the amici States to lose many millions of dollars in tax revenue,” the brief states.

“In contrast, the harms asserted by the plaintiff States are either illusory or result from factors other than DACA, such as the mere presence of undocumented immigrants or the ancillary consequences of deferred action under decades-old federal regulations and policies. Indeed, the federal government began DACA in 2012, yet plaintiffs waited until 2018 to file this suit—a delay of nearly six years that undermines any claim of immediate, irreparable injury warranting a preliminary injunction. The nationwide injunction that plaintiffs seek is inappropriate for other reasons too: for example, that injunction would directly conflict with preliminary injunctions that two separate district courts have issued in favor of the amici States after rejecting DHS’s claims that DACA is unlawful.”

A copy of the brief is attached.

#

For more information, contact:

James W. Walther
Special Assistant to the Attorney General
(808) 586-1284
Email: james.w.walther@hawaii.gov
Web: <http://aq.hawaii.gov>
Twitter: @ATGHlgov

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF TEXAS
BROWNSVILLE DIVISION

State of Texas, et al.,

Plaintiffs,

v.

The United States of America, et al.,

Defendants,

Karla Perez, et al.,

Defendants-Intervenors,

and

State of New Jersey,

Defendant-Intervenor.

Case No. 1:18-cv-00068

MEMORANDUM OF LAW FOR AMICI CURIAE THE STATES OF NEW YORK, CALIFORNIA, CONNECTICUT, DELAWARE, HAWAI'I, ILLINOIS, IOWA,
MAINE, MARYLAND, MASSACHUSETTS, MINNESOTA, NEW MEXICO,
NORTH CAROLINA, OREGON, PENNSYLVANIA, RHODE ISLAND, VIRGINIA,
VERMONT, AND WASHINGTON, AND THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

XAVIER BECERRA
Attorney General
State of California
1300 I St.
Sacramento, CA 95814

BARBARA D. UNDERWOOD
Attorney General
State of New York
28 Liberty Street, 23rd Floor
New York, NY 10005
Telephone: (212) 416-8022
Facsimile: (212) 416-8962

(Complete counsel list appears on signature pages.)

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
TABLE OF AUTHORITIES	iii
INTEREST OF THE AMICI STATES	1
STATEMENT OF THE ISSUES TO BE RULED UPON BY THE COURT	2
ARGUMENT	3
PLAINTIFFS’ REQUESTED PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE DENIED	3
POINT I	3
PLAINTIFFS CANNOT MAKE THE LEGAL SHOWING REQUIRED TO OBTAIN A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION.....	3
A. Plaintiffs Cannot Show a Likelihood of Success on the Merits Because the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) Policy Is Lawful.	3
1. DACA is consistent with the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).	3
a. The INA vests the Executive with discretion to create class- wide frameworks for evaluating requests for deferred action and related relief.	3
b. DACA is narrower and more tailored than Deferred Action for Parents of Americans and Lawful Permanent Residents (DAPA).	8
c. Plaintiffs’ arguments under the Take Care Clause turn entirely on the incorrect assertion that DACA violates the INA.....	10
2. Notice and comment was not required prior to DACA’s implementation.	10
3. Plaintiffs’ APA challenges amount to untimely and impermissible collateral attacks on decades-old federal policies and regulations.	12
B. Plaintiffs Cannot Show That They Will Suffer Irreparable Harm If DACA Is Not Enjoined.....	14

	Page
1. States and their lawful residents benefit from the ability of DACA grantees to live and work openly.	14
2. Plaintiffs fail to establish any harm traceable to DACA.	15
3. Plaintiffs’ nearly six-year delay in seeking an injunction against DACA reinforces their lack of irreparable injury from that policy.	18
C. The Balance of the Equities and the Public Interest Favor Denying Plaintiffs’ Requested Injunction.	19
POINT II	21
THE CONFLICT BETWEEN PLAINTIFFS’ PROPOSED PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION AND TWO EXISTING PRELIMINARY INJUNCTIONS ALSO WARRANTS DENIAL OF PLAINTIFFS’ REQUESTED RELIEF	21
CONCLUSION.....	24

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases	Page(s)
Arizona Dream Act Coal. v. Brewer , 855 F.3d 957 (9th Cir. 2017)	9
Arizona v. United States , 567 U.S. 387 (2012).....	4, 10
Arpaio v. Obama , 27 F. Supp. 3d 185 (D.D.C. 2014).....	3, 9, 12
Batalla Vidal v. Nielsen , 279 F. Supp. 3d 401 (E.D.N.Y. 2018)	passim
Benisek v. Lamone , 585 U.S. ___, 138 S. Ct. 1942 (2018).....	18
Chaudhry v. Holder , 705 F.3d 289 (7th Cir. 2013)	6
Colorado River Water Conservation Dist. v. United States , 424 U.S. 800 (1976).....	23
Crane v. Johnson , 783 F.3d 244 (5th Cir 2015)	16
DHS v. Regents of Univ. of California , 138 S. Ct. 1182 (2018).....	23
Dillard v. Security Pac. Corp. , 85 F.3d 621, 1996 WL 254971 (5th Cir. 1996)	18
Dunn-McCampbell Royalty Interest, Inc. v. National Park Serv. , 112 F.3d 1283 (5th Cir. 1997)	13-14
FCC v. Fox Television Stations, Inc. , 556 U.S. 502 (2009).....	21
Feller v. Brock , 802 F.2d 722 (4th Cir. 1986)	23
Hotel & Rest. Emps. Union v. Smith , 846 F.2d 1499 (D.C. Cir. 1988).....	6
Kendall v. United States ex rel. Stokes , 37 U.S. 524 (1838).....	10

Cases	Page(s)
Lincoln v. Vigil , 508 U.S. 182 (1993).....	10
Lydo Enters. v. City of Las Vegas , 745 F.2d 1211 (9th Cir. 1984)	18
Mann Mfg., Inc. v. Hortex, Inc. , 439 F.2d 403 (5th Cir. 1971)	22-23
Massachusetts v. EPA , 549 U.S. 497 (2007).....	17
Mower v. Boyer , 811 S.W.2d 560 (Tex. 1991).....	23
NAACP v. Trump , 298 F. Supp. 3d 209 (D.D.C. 2018).....	22
Quince Orchard Valley Citizens Ass’n v. Hodel , 872 F.2d 75 (4th Cir. 1989)	18
Regents of Univ. of Cal. v. DHS , 279 F. Supp. 3d 1011 (N.D. Cal. 2018).....	passim
Reno v. American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm. , 525 U.S. 471 (1999).....	5, 17
Save Power Ltd. v. Syntek Fin. Corp. , 121 F.3d 947 (5th Cir. 1997)	23
Sutter Corp. v. P & P Indus., Inc. , 125 F.3d 914 (5th Cir. 1997)	23
Texas Sav. & Cmty. Bankers Ass’n v. Federal Hous. Fin. Bd. , 201 F.3d 551 (5th Cir. 2000)	11
Texas v. United States , 809 F.3d 134 (5th Cir. 2015)	passim
West Gulf Maritime Ass’n v. ILA Deep Sea Local 24 , 751 F.2d 721 (5th Cir. 1985)	22-23
Wind River Mining Corp. v. United States , 946 F.2d 710 (9th Cir. 1991)	14

Cases	Page(s)
Winter v. Natural Res. Defense Council, Inc. , 555 U.S. 7 (2008).....	2
Wong v. Doar , 571 F.3d 247 (2d Cir. 2009).....	14
 Federal Laws
6 U.S.C. § 202(5)	4
8 U.S.C.
§ 1103(a)	4
§ 1182(a)(9)(B)	13
§ 1227(d)(2)	7
§ 1324a.....	15
§ 1324a(h)(3)	5
§ 1601.....	15
§ 1611(b)(2)	5
28 U.S.C. § 2401(a)	12
Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2014, Pub. L. No. 113-76, 128 Stat. 5 (2014).....	15
DHS Appropriations Act, 2010, Pub. L. No. 111-83, 123 Stat. 2142 (2009).....	15
DHS Appropriations Act, 2015, Pub. L. No. 114-4, 129 Stat. 39 (2015).....	15
Immigration Act of 1990, Pub. L. 101-649, 104 Stat. 4978	7
Real ID Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-13, 119 Stat. 231	7
USA PATRIOT Act, Pub. L. 107-56, 115 Stat. 272.....	7
Victims of Trafficking and Violence Prevention Act of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386, 114 Stat.1464	7
 Administrative Sources
8 C.F.R.
§ 1.3(a)(4)(vi).....	5, 13
§ 274a.12(c)(14).....	13, 15
44 Fed. Reg. 10,369 (Feb. 20, 1979)	5
46 Fed. Reg. 25,079 (May 5, 1981)	5

Administrative Sources	Page(s)
Mem. from Donald Neufeld et al., Consolidation of Guidance Concerning Unlawful Presence (May 6, 2009).....	6
Mem. from Jeh Charles Johnson, Secretary: Exercising Prosecutorial Discretion with Respect to Certain Individuals Who Are the Parents of U.S. Citizens or Permanent Residents at 2 (Nov. 20, 2014).....	13
Mem. from Johnny N. Williams, Exec. Assoc. Comm’r, Office of Field Operations, Unlawful Presence 1, (June 12, 2002).....	13
Mem. from Janet Napolitano, Secretary: Exercising Prosecutorial Discretion with Respect to Individuals Who Came to the United States as Children (June 12, 2012).....	4
Sam Bernsen, INS Gen. Counsel, Leave to Labor , 52 No. 35 Interpreter Releases 291, 294 (Sep. 1975).....	5
 Miscellaneous Authorities
H.R. Rep. No. 111-157 (2009).....	15
Immigration Act of 1989: Hearings Before the Subcomm. on Immigration, Refugees, and International Law of the House Comm. on the Judiciary , 101st Cong., 2d Sess. (1990).....	6
Kenneth Megan, Bipartisan Policy Ctr., Immigration and the Labor Force (Aug. 25, 2015).....	15
Recent Developments , 67 No. 6 Interpreter Releases 153 (Feb. 5, 1990).....	6
S. Rep. No. 99-132 (1985).....	6
U.S. Customs & Immigr. Servs., Number of Form I-821D, Consideration of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals by Fiscal Year, Quarter, Intake and Case Status (through June 30, 2018).....	12

INTEREST OF THE AMICI STATES

The amici States of New York, California, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawai‘i, Illinois, Iowa, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Mexico, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Virginia, Vermont, and Washington, and the District of Columbia, would suffer serious harms—to their institutions, fiscs, residents, and economies—from an order preliminarily enjoining the federal policy known as Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA).

DACA represents an exercise of the Executive’s long-recognized discretion to forbear enforcement against defined classes of persons whom federal immigration law makes removable from the United States: a practice commonly referred to as “deferred action.” Specifically, DACA provides a framework for the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) to receive and process requests for deferred action from law-abiding individuals who were brought to the United States as children. Longstanding federal regulations allow deferred-action recipients meeting certain criteria to seek and obtain work authorization, enabling amici’s agencies, public universities, and public hospitals to hire DACA grantees. Private businesses and nonprofit organizations within the amici States have also come to employ and depend upon DACA grantees. In all, nearly 750,000 DACA grantees who formerly lived in the shadows now openly contribute to their communities and economies.

As two district courts have now found, ending DACA would injure the amici States as employers, providers of health services, and proprietors of public universities. It would also cause the amici States to lose many millions of dollars in tax revenue. See Regents of Univ. of Cal. v. DHS, 279 F. Supp. 3d 1011, 1046-47 (N.D. Cal. 2018) (four States); Batalla Vidal v. Nielsen, 279 F. Supp. 3d 401, 433-35, 437 (E.D.N.Y. 2018) (sixteen States and the District of Columbia).

In contrast, the harms asserted by the plaintiff States are either illusory or result from factors other than DACA, such as the mere presence of undocumented immigrants or the ancillary consequences of deferred action under decades-old federal regulations and policies. Indeed, the federal government began DACA in 2012, yet plaintiffs waited until 2018 to file this suit—a delay of nearly six years that undermines any claim of immediate, irreparable injury warranting a preliminary injunction. The nationwide injunction that plaintiffs seek is inappropriate for other reasons too: for example, that injunction would directly conflict with preliminary injunctions that two separate district courts have issued in favor of the amici States after rejecting DHS’s claims that DACA is unlawful. See Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1048; Batalla Vidal, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 437-38. Those preliminary injunctions are currently being reviewed by federal appellate courts, which are the appropriate bodies to rectify any legal errors in the Regents and Batalla Vidal decisions.

For these reasons and the other reasons stated below, plaintiffs’ request for a preliminary injunction should be denied.

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUES TO BE RULED UPON BY THE COURT

1. Whether plaintiffs’ request for a nationwide preliminary injunction against DACA should be denied because plaintiffs cannot show a likelihood of success on the merits or a likelihood of “irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief,” or “that the balance of equities tips in [their] favor, and that an injunction is in the public interest.” See Winter v. Natural Res. Defense Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20 (2008).

2. Whether plaintiffs’ requested preliminary injunction should be denied for the additional reason that a nationwide injunction against DACA would conflict with at least two existing injunctions issued by coordinate federal courts.

ARGUMENT

PLAINTIFFS' REQUESTED PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE DENIED

POINT I

PLAINTIFFS CANNOT MAKE THE LEGAL SHOWING REQUIRED TO OBTAIN A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION

A. Plaintiffs Cannot Show a Likelihood of Success on the Merits Because the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) Policy Is Lawful.

The Secretary of DHS has broad discretion regarding the enforcement of federal immigration laws. That discretion includes the authority to create frameworks through which defined classes of persons may request relief from removal and seek other benefits (such as work authorization) during periods of discretionary enforcement forbearance. The Executive has repeatedly exercised that authority for more than five decades, and Congress and the courts have repeatedly recognized the legality of such actions. Moreover, because DACA differs significantly in its scope, justifications, and criteria from the policy known as Deferred Action for Parents of Americans and Lawful Permanent Residents (DAPA), the outcome here is not controlled by Texas v. United States, 809 F.3d 134 (5th Cir. 2015), aff'd by an equally divided court, 136 S. Ct. 2271 (2016). Nor are any of plaintiffs' other arguments likely to succeed.

1. DACA is consistent with the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

a. The INA vests the Executive with discretion to create class-wide frameworks for evaluating requests for deferred action and related relief.

The federal government lacks the resources to remove even five percent of the over 11 million undocumented immigrants who reside in the country without legal status. See U.S. Br. 3-4, United States v. Texas, 136 S. Ct. 2271 (No. 15-674) ("Texas (U.S.)") (App'x of Amici States ("AA") 36-37); see also Arpaio v. Obama, 27 F. Supp. 3d 185, 192-93 (D.D.C. 2014), aff'd, 787

F.3d 11 (D.C. Cir. 2015), cert. denied, 136 S. Ct. 900 (2016). Accordingly, a “principal feature of the removal system is the broad discretion exercised by immigration officials.” Arizona v. United States, 567 U.S. 387, 396 (2012). For persons here unlawfully, federal officials “must decide whether it makes sense to pursue removal at all.” Id. In choosing whether to offer discretionary relief, DHS may be guided by “immediate humanitarian concerns” as well as the need to prioritize limited enforcement resources. Id. For example, DHS may rationally focus on removing dangerous criminals, instead of undocumented immigrants who are “trying to support their families” and have “long ties to the community.” Id.

To provide a framework for exercising enforcement discretion, the federal government has since the 1960s established more than twenty channels through which individualized forbearance determinations may be made for defined classes of potential applicants who are low priorities for removal. See U.S. Br. 5, 48-60, Texas (U.S.) (AA 38, 44-56) (enumerating and describing policies). DACA is one such channel. The class for which it provides “case by case review” consists of persons who were brought to this country as children, have strong roots in their U.S. communities, and have not engaged in serious criminal conduct. See Mem. from Janet Napolitano, Secretary: Exercising Prosecutorial Discretion with Respect to Individuals Who Came to the United States as Children at 1-2 (June 12, 2012) (“DACA Memorandum”) (AA 1-2).

Some of the Executive’s discretionary forbearance policies reflect specific provisions of the INA or other statutes, but many others have been grounded in the Executive’s broad statutory power to set immigration enforcement priorities rather than any more targeted grant of authority.¹

¹ See 6 U.S.C. § 202(5) (Secretary’s responsibility for “[e]stablishing national immigration enforcement policies and priorities”); 8 U.S.C. § 1103(a) (Secretary “shall establish such regulations . . . and perform such other acts as he deems necessary for carrying out his authority under the provisions of this Chapter”).

The Supreme Court in 1999 expressly approved of the “regular practice” of granting “deferred action” as a “commendable exercise in administrative discretion, developed without express statutory authorization.” Reno v. American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm., 525 U.S. 471, 483-84 (1999).² And “[e]very modern presidential administration has relied on extra-statutory discretionary-relief programs to shield certain removable aliens from deportation.” Batalla Vidal, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 422.

In a practice also dating back to at least the early 1970s,³ the federal agencies charged with immigration enforcement have granted recipients of enforcement relief who show economic need the opportunity to work and to receive Social Security benefits earned through their work. The ability to grant work authorization was codified in regulations in 1981, see Employment Authorization, 46 Fed. Reg. 25,079, 25,080 (May 5, 1981), and confirmed by Congress thereafter.⁴ In 1986—at the same time as it imposed a general prohibition on hiring undocumented immigrants—Congress expressly ratified an employer’s ability to hire a person who is “authorized to be so employed by [the INA] or by the Attorney General.” 8 U.S.C. § 1324a(h)(3) (emphasis added). As the federal government explained to the Supreme Court, these sources of law reflect “the commonsense proposition that aliens who may remain in this country, as a matter of the ² See also Batalla Vidal, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 422 (noting there is “no principled reason why the Executive Branch may grant deferred action to particular immigrants but may not create a program by which individual immigrants who meet certain prescribed criteria are eligible to request deferred action”).

³ See Sam Bernsen, INS Gen. Counsel, Leave to Labor, 52 No. 35 Interpreter Releases 291, 294 (Sep. 1975) (noting the ordinary practice of authorizing work for, inter alia, aliens with “extended voluntary departure” or “whose departure or deportation will not be enforced”), quoted in U.S. Br. 51, Texas (U.S.) (AA 47).

⁴ Likewise, regulations dating back to 1979 have allowed deferred-action recipients to participate in Social Security. 44 Fed. Reg. 10,369, 10,371 (Feb. 20, 1979). And the INA now reflects Congress’s plain intent to vest the Secretary of DHS with discretion to grant Social Security benefits to aliens who have been granted deferred action. 8 U.S.C. § 1611(b)(2) (bar on granting Social Security benefits “shall not apply . . . to an alien who is lawfully present in the United States as determined by the [Secretary]” (emphasis added)); see also 8 C.F.R. § 1.3(a)(4)(vi) (defining “lawfully present” “[f]or the purposes of 8 U.S.C. § 1611(b)(2)” to include specified “classes of aliens permitted to remain in the United States because DHS has decided for humanitarian or other public policy reasons not to initiate removal proceedings or enforce departure,” including “[a]liens currently in deferred action status”).

Executive’s discretion, also should be able to lawfully make ends meet for themselves and their families.” U.S. Reply Br. 15, Texas (U.S.) (AA 59).

In granting deferred action, the Executive has never purported to disturb Congress’s exclusive authority to set the criteria for immigrants to obtain lawful immigration status. Plaintiffs confuse matters (Pls.’ Br. in Supp. of Prelim. Injunction (“Br.”) 23-24) by equating DHS’s construction of “lawful presence” with a “lawful status” that would provide a defense to removal. See, e.g., Chaudhry v. Holder, 705 F.3d 289, 291-92 (7th Cir. 2013). Federal regulations, agency guidance, and the case law recognize that the Executive treats “lawful presence” and “lawful status” as separate and distinct legal concepts, and does not equate “lawful presence” with a defense to removal.⁵

Congress has repeatedly ratified and confirmed the legality of discretionary relief and work authorization under this longstanding framework. For example, the Reagan and George H. W. Bush administrations offered extended voluntary departure—which entailed forbearance from removal and eligibility for work authorization—to approximately 1.5 million relatives of immigrants newly eligible for lawful status.⁶ The Executive implemented this “family fairness” policy just after Congress had deliberately declined to give the exact same class any statutory protection.⁷ See S. Rep. No. 99-132, at 16 (1985) (AA 23). When Congress later did enact such ⁵ See, e.g., Mem. from Donald Neufeld, Consolidation of Guidance Concerning Unlawful Presence 42 (May 6, 2009) (AA 9) (deferred action “does not make the alien’s status lawful”); U.S. Br. 38, Texas (U.S.) (AA 40); Chaudhry, 705 F.3d at 291-92 (“It is entirely possible for aliens to be lawfully present (i.e., in a ‘period of stay authorized by the Attorney General’) even though their lawful status has expired.”).

⁶ See Recent Developments, 67 No. 6 Interpreter Releases 153, 153-54 (Feb. 5, 1990) (AA 329-330); Immigration Act of 1989: Hearings Before the Subcomm. on Immigration, Refugees, and International Law of the House Comm. on the Judiciary, 101st Cong., 2d Sess. Pt. 2, at 49, 56 (1990) (AA 26, 29) (1.5 million persons were eligible).

⁷ As the United States has acknowledged, that policy was “extra-statutory.” Tr. of Oral Argument at 88-89, Texas (U.S.) (AA 62-63); see also Hotel & Rest. Emps. Union v. Smith, 846 F.2d 1499, 1519 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (en protections for a large class including the family fairness recipients, Congress made such relief prospective only, starting one year from passage. For the interim one-year period, Congress expressly relied on the Executive's ongoing discretionary-relief policy. See Immigration Act of 1990, Pub. L. 101-649, § 301(g), 104 Stat. 4978, 5030.

In 2008, Congress affirmed another ongoing class-wide discretionary-relief policy that, since 2001, had offered deferred action to victims of human trafficking and other crimes who lacked lawful status but were eligible for U and T visas. When Congress in 2008 authorized administrative stays of removal for that class, it specified that denial of a stay would not “preclude the alien from applying for . . . deferred action” under DHS's extant policy. 8 U.S.C. § 1227(d)(2).

Numerous other statutes have likewise presupposed the legality of deferred action and affirmatively encouraged its use.⁸ Congress has never questioned or displaced the Executive's discretionary power to defer enforcement action, or its authority to establish channels for the exercise of that discretion.

Plaintiffs are also misguided in arguing (Br. 31-32) that historical exercises of discretionary relief were permissible only because they were interstitial to statutory legalization schemes. When the Executive has implemented discretionary-relief policies that Congress later ratified, it was not necessarily clear that Congress would ultimately pass legislation to protect the covered groups. Discretionary-relief policies appear interstitial only in retrospect. And as one district court has banc) (per curiam) (op. of Silberman, J.) (describing policy as an “extrastatutory decision to withhold enforcement” as a matter of discretion).

⁸ See, e.g., Victims of Trafficking and Violence Prevention Act of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386, § 1503(d)(2)(D)(i)(II), 114 Stat.1464, 1521-22 (making two additional classes eligible for deferred action); USA PATRIOT Act, Pub. L. 107-56, § 423(b), 115 Stat. 272, 361 (extending deferred-action eligibility to certain family members of victims of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks); Real ID Act of 2005, Pub. L. No. 109-13, § 202(c)(2)(B)(viii), 119 Stat. 231, 313 (authorizing States to issue driver's licenses to undocumented immigrants with “approved deferred action status”).

noted, DACA has hallmarks of an “interstitial” policy “given that both sides of the aisle and our two most recent presidents have called for Dreamer legislation.” Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1044 (citation omitted).

b. DACA is narrower and more tailored than Deferred Action for Parents of Americans and Lawful Permanent Residents (DAPA).

Plaintiffs’ challenge to DACA relies almost entirely on the Fifth Circuit’s Texas decision regarding the separate DAPA policy. But that decision did not even finally resolve the legality of DAPA: it decided an interlocutory appeal from a preliminary injunction; and it relied in substantial part on preliminary factual findings made by this Court without the benefit of an evidentiary hearing, based on affidavits that are now more than three years old and that have been seriously undermined by the record in this case. Moreover, in concluding that DAPA exceeded the Secretary’s discretionary authority and could not be justified through analogy to prior discretionary-relief policies, the Fifth Circuit focused on numerous DAPA-specific rationales that do not apply to the more tailored DACA policy, noting that “any extrapolation from DACA [to DAPA] must be done carefully.” Texas, 809 F.3d at 173. Given the more limited, tailored nature of DACA, extrapolating in the other direction requires even greater care. Plaintiffs and the federal government are simply incorrect to argue that the Fifth Circuit’s decision dictates a conclusion that DACA is unlawful.

First, the Fifth Circuit concluded that DAPA was inconsistent with Congress’s declared intent because the INA already contained “an intricate process for illegal aliens to derive a lawful immigration classification from their children’s immigration status,” which was available to most of those who would have been eligible for deferred action under DAPA. Id. at 179 (citing 8 U.S.C. §§ 1151(b)(2)(A)(i), 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), 1201(a), 1255). Congress has created no comparable avenue for the class of persons eligible for DACA to obtain lawful status. See Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1040 (citing Arizona Dream Act Coal. v. Brewer, 855 F.3d 957, 976 n. 10 (9th Cir. 2017), cert. denied, 138 S. Ct. 1279 (2018)). Therefore, unlike the parents covered by DAPA, none of the “INA’s specific and intricate provisions” have “directly addressed the precise question” of relief available to the young people eligible for DACA. See Texas, 809 F.3d at 186 (quotation marks omitted).

Second, the Fifth Circuit focused on the sheer number of persons covered by DAPA, which substantially exceeded the scale of any prior discretionary-relief policy. It “conclude[d] only that the INA does not grant the Secretary discretion to grant deferred action and lawful presence on a class-wide basis to 4.3 million otherwise removable aliens.” Texas, 809 F.3d at 186 n.202 (emphasis added).⁹ DACA covers far fewer persons—and a smaller percentage of the undocumented population—than either DAPA or the family fairness policy ratified by Congress. Both DAPA and the family fairness policy were available to about 40 percent of the undocumented population; only about ten percent of the undocumented population (1.2 million persons) meet DACA’s criteria. See Texas, 809 F.3d at 174 n.138; Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1042; U.S. Br. 56-57, Texas (U.S.) (AA 52-53); Arpaio, 27 F. Supp. 3d at 192-93.

Third, DACA is tailored to cover only a class of young people who are not at all “likely to have backgrounds” that would warrant higher enforcement scrutiny, see Texas, 809 F.3d at 174, and for whom there are substantial humanitarian reasons weighing against removal. Forbearing from enforcement against law-abiding individuals brought to the United States as children—to preserve scarce resources for removing criminals, terrorists, and others whose removal might advance the Nation’s safety and security—is the paradigm of rational enforcement prioritization. See Arizona, 567 U.S. at 396; U.S. Br. 45, Texas (U.S.) (AA 41) (noting that DACA-eligible persons possess “particularly strong ties to this country” and that many “have never known another home.”).

⁹ See also Texas, 809 F.3d at 179 (noting that “4.3 million illegal aliens” not eligible for relief under the INA were eligible for DAPA); id. at 181 (noting the economic and political significance of a policy covering “4.3 million otherwise removable aliens”).

c. Plaintiffs’ arguments under the Take Care Clause turn entirely on the incorrect assertion that DACA violates the INA.

Plaintiffs’ arguments under the Take Care Clause (Br. 37-40) merely recycle their statutory argument that DACA conflicts with the INA.¹⁰ But contrary to their assertions, the DACA Memorandum did not “dispense” with the INA. See Br. 37. Instead, it represented a rational exercise of discretion by the Executive regarding how best to enforce that statute. See supra Point I.A.1.a. Given the sums appropriated by Congress, DHS can remove only a small fraction of those here unlawfully. Forbearing enforcement against law-abiding individuals brought here as children in order to pursue more serious offenders is hardly a “complete abdication” (see Br. 39) of DHS’s statutory responsibilities. See infra at 17-18. Nor are plaintiffs correct in their claim (Br. 38) that the INA prohibits DHS from deeming DACA grantees—like all other deferred-action recipients—to be “lawfully present” during periods of discretionary forbearance. See supra at 5-6.

2. Notice and comment was not required prior to DACA’s implementation.

DACA is a general statement of policy that “advise[s] the public prospectively of the manner in which the agency proposes to exercise a discretionary power.” Lincoln v. Vigil, 508 U.S. 182, 197 (1993) (quotation marks omitted). The DACA Memorandum channels undocumented immigrants who meet certain threshold criteria into a process for DHS to make individualized deferred-action determinations. No person has any substantive entitlement to obtain deferred action under DACA, and the Executive retains discretion to revoke any grant of deferred action at any time. See Texas Sav. & Cmty. Bankers Ass'n v. Federal Hous. Fin. Bd., 201 F.3d 551, 556 (5th Cir. 2000) (discretionary “guidelines” that do not impose binding “rights and obligations” on regulated parties are not subject to notice and comment).

¹⁰ In addition, Plaintiffs misplace their reliance on Kendall v. United States ex rel. Stokes, 37 U.S. 524 (1838), which they proffer as purported authority for judicial intervention under the Take Care Clause. That case addressed only whether an executive officer could be compelled through mandamus to perform “a mere ministerial act,” id. at 610, and the President had “disclaimed” any source of authority allowing the officer to avoid that duty, id. at 613.

Plaintiffs miss the mark in emphasizing (Br. 34-36) statements about DACA’s incidental benefits that the amici States made in lawsuits challenging the September 2017 termination of DACA. As amici explained in those suits, terminating DACA categorically deprived DHS officers of the discretion to grant DACA requests and renewals, and stripped existing DACA grantees of deferred action’s attendant benefits without any individualized assessment. (AA 165, 168-171, 192.) In contrast, the creation of DACA had no such binding, generalized qualities.

Indeed, as the Fifth Circuit recognized, the language of the DACA Memorandum does not bind DHS agents but “facially purports to confer discretion” to approve or deny deferred-action requests and work authorizations. See Texas, 809 F.3d at 170 n. 126, 171 (construing same discretion-granting language in DAPA Memorandum and noting “the express delegation of discretion on the face of the DACA Memo”). Although DACA grantees have obtained work authorization and other incidental benefits via the operation of longstanding DHS regulations, the DACA Memorandum does not itself confer such benefits or vest any person with legal rights or obligations. The memorandum simply creates a process for soliciting deferred-action requests by defining a class of worthy applicants.

The available evidence shows that, as implemented by DHS, the DACA policy does not guarantee deferred action to all eligible persons. The denial rate in 2015—after excluding requests rejected for technical reasons—was five percent, a rate that is neither negligible nor “[s]urprising given the self-selecting nature of the program.” Texas, 809 F.3d at 210 (King, J., dissenting); see Arpaio, 27 F. Supp. 3d at 209 n.13 (statistical evidence shows that “case-by-case review is in operation”). More recent data highlight the discretion DHS has continued to exercise, as the denial rate for initial requests has increased to over eight percent, with a full 77,583 denials since DACA’s inception.¹¹

In addition, whatever evidence regarding discretion existed in 2015—when DHS had just begun tracking complete data, Texas, 809 F.3d at 211 (King, J., dissenting)—has little probative value now. See supra at 8. The ongoing discovery mandated by this Court is already confirming that DHS agents have in fact been complying with the text of the DACA Memorandum and evaluating requests on a case-by-case basis. For example, in a different lawsuit, DHS has admitted that it exercises its prerogative to issue discretionary denials even for persons who fully met DACA’s criteria. (AA 163.)

3. Plaintiffs’ APA challenges amount to untimely and impermissible collateral attacks on decades-old federal policies and regulations.

Plaintiffs also can show no likelihood of success on their APA challenges, which amount to time-barred collateral attacks on federal policies adopted decades ago. See 28 U.S.C. § 2401(a) (six-year limitations period under APA). Although plaintiffs’ suit purportedly “challenges the 2012 directive creating DACA” (Br. 6), the gravamen of their APA claims is not actually a challenge to the DACA Memorandum. Plaintiffs admit to this Court (Br. 24) that deferred action is a permissible classification, “rooted in prosecutorial discretion” and approved by the Supreme ¹¹ U.S. Customs & Immigr. Servs., Number of Form I-821D, Consideration of Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals by Fiscal Year, Quarter, Intake and Case Status (through June 30, 2018) (AA 13).

Court. And plaintiffs have conceded to the Supreme Court that deferred action can be offered to a broad class of persons, at least insofar as deferred action consists of “simply forbearing from removal.”¹²

Plaintiffs’ APA claims thus boil down to substantive and procedural challenges to the agency actions that have extended incidental benefits—such as work authorization—to deferred-action recipients generally. But those ancillary benefits arise out of longstanding regulations exercising the Executive’s authority to deem all deferred-action recipients “lawfully present” for certain purposes.¹³ See 8 C.F.R. §§ 1.3(a)(4)(vi), 274a.12(c)(14). Plaintiffs are simply incorrect in attributing any of those benefits to the DACA Memorandum (see Br. 23), which does not even mention “lawful presence.”¹⁴

Accordingly, plaintiffs’ APA challenge should be rejected as an untimely collateral attack on agency rules promulgated decades before DACA.¹⁵ Contrary to plaintiffs’ assertions (see Br. 46-47), neither DHS’s promulgation of DACA nor DHS’s individualized grants of benefits to any person reset the clock for nonregulated parties like plaintiffs to bring facial APA challenges to DHS’s decades-old policies. As the Fifth Circuit has held, “an agency’s application of a rule” to a ¹² “I do believe that they could do it class based if they were simply forbearing from removal. . . . [G]iven that they are removing 400,000 people per year, we admit that they could do forbearance from removal.” Tr. of Oral Arg. at 50, Texas (U.S.) (Scott Keller) (AA 66).

¹³ For example, the re-entry bar is tolled for deferred-action recipients because, for at least a decade prior to the DACA Memorandum, DHS formally construed deferred action as entailing a period of authorized stay under 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(ii). Mem. from Johnny N. Williams, Exec. Assoc. Comm’r, Office of Field Operations, Unlawful Presence 1 (June 12, 2002) (AA 10).

¹⁴ In contrast, the DAPA Memorandum expressly stated that recipients would be considered “lawfully present in the United States.” Mem. from Jeh Charles Johnson, Secretary: Exercising Prosecutorial Discretion with Respect to Certain Individuals Who Are the Parents of U.S. Citizens or Permanent Residents at 2 (Nov. 20, 2014) (“DAPA Memorandum”) (AA 5).

¹⁵ See Dunn-McCampbell Royalty Interest, Inc. v. National Park Serv., 112 F.3d 1283, 1287 (5th Cir. 1997) (rejecting facial challenge as untimely under APA because there was no “direct, final agency action involving the particular plaintiff within six years of filing suit”).

specific case “creates a new, six-year cause of action” only for the parties directly regulated by that specific application.¹⁶ Dunn-McCampbell, 112 F.3d at 1287; accord Wind River Mining Corp. v. United States, 946 F.2d 710, 716 (9th Cir. 1991) (“challenge must be brought within six years of the agency’s application of the disputed decision to the challenger” (emphasis added)); see also Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1044 (citing laches as a “powerful consideration” when discussing likelihood of the Fifth Circuit upholding a possible injunction against DACA).

B. Plaintiffs Cannot Show That They Will Suffer Irreparable Harm If DACA Is Not Enjoined.

1. States and their lawful residents benefit from the ability of DACA grantees to live and work openly.

In the approximately six years since DACA was adopted, its grantees have been eligible to seek and obtain work authorization. That authorization, in turn, has enabled DACA grantees to make important contributions to their States and to become integral parts of their communities. Amici States, for example, employ many grantees as providers of health and social services, public safety officers, teachers, government agency staff, and faculty and staff at public universities. (AA 172-178, 293-309.)

Plaintiffs are not correct that DACA causes “labor-market distortions” (Br. 13-15) that harm lawful residents of the plaintiff States by subjecting those residents to competition from undocumented persons. Contrary to plaintiffs’ arguments, work authorization under deferred-action policies like DACA serves to ameliorate distortions of the labor markets that would otherwise result.¹⁷ Most DACA grantees are likely to remain in this country with or without DACA. The federal government has acknowledged that it directs its limited enforcement resources towards the serious criminals that Congress directed DHS to prioritize for deportation,¹⁸ rather than the “low priority cases” represented by DACA-eligible persons. (AA 1-3.) And the government has acknowledged that persons who “have lived in this country continuously” for years—and who have not, as adults, formed residential ties to any other country—“are particularly unlikely to depart voluntarily” from the place they consider home. See U.S. Br. 45, Reply Br. 8, Texas (U.S.) (AA 41, 58).

¹⁶ For procedural challenges, like plaintiffs’ notice-and-comment claim, the six-year statute of limitations does not reset even for directly regulated entities. Wong v. Doar, 571 F.3d 247, 262-63 (2d Cir. 2009).

DACA mitigates the harms that arise when these undocumented persons are forced to work in the underground economy at depressed wages, by offering them a means to obtain work authorization. See 8 U.S.C. §§ 1324a, 1601; 8 C.F.R. § 274a.12(c)(14). As the federal government has elsewhere explained, that reduction in underground employment helps lawful residents by removing competition for jobs from undocumented persons who are relegated to working illegally, and sometimes forced to accept wages and other workplace conditions that do not comply with legal requirements. See U.S. Br. 22 n.5, 46-47, Texas (U.S.) (AA 39, 42-43).

2. Plaintiffs fail to establish any harm traceable to DACA.

Although plaintiffs assert that they are harmed by the costs of providing education, emergency medical care, and other services to undocumented persons (Br. 10-13, 41), they have not alleged that any State other than Texas will suffer any specific financial harms¹⁹—and as to Texas they have failed to tie the alleged state expenses to DACA grantees, rather than undocumented persons generally. A showing that “illegal immigration is costing [a] state money” is not the same thing as a showing “that DACA is costing the state money.” Crane v. Johnson, 783 F.3d 244, 252 (5th Cir 2015). Moreover, to the extent the costs plaintiffs identify stem from services provided to DACA grantees, those costs flow largely from the presence of those persons in the plaintiff States—a fact that is likely to persist whether DACA exists or not. Indeed, DACA enhances the economic self-sufficiency of deferred-action recipients, making them less likely to rely on emergency medical care, Medicaid, or other public assistance. See Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1047-48. Put another way, DACA decreases many of the generalized fiscal burdens that plaintiffs identify as injuries.

¹⁷ See, e.g., Kenneth Megan, Bipartisan Policy Ctr., Immigration and the Labor Force (Aug. 25, 2015) (concluding that employment data do not support notion that immigration leads to lower employment among native-born Americans) (AA 315-319).

¹⁸ See, e.g., DHS Appropriations Act, 2015, Pub. L. No. 114-4, tit. II, 129 Stat. 39, 43 (2015); Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2014, Pub. L. No. 113-76, div. F., tit. II, 128 Stat. 5, 251 (2014); DHS Appropriations Act, 2010, Pub. L. No. 111-83, tit. II, 123 Stat. 2142, 2149 (2009); H.R. Rep. No. 111-157, at 8 (2009) (AA 20).

In addition, plaintiffs cannot plausibly claim to suffer any harm resulting from many of the other benefits received by DACA grantees. For instance, plaintiffs complain that certain DACA grantees have received advance parole and subsequently adjusted their immigration status to lawful permanent residency (LPR), which in turn allows them to apply for citizenship. See Br. 25-26. But plaintiffs are not harmed by any qualifying individual’s adjustment to LPR status—or citizenship. States suffer no cognizable injury from the presence of additional lawful permanent residents or citizens within their borders. Similarly, the plaintiff States suffer no injury from DACA grantees’ qualification for Social Security Numbers, the Earned Income Tax Credit, Medicare, and federal railroad retirement benefits. See Br. 27, 31. Plaintiffs do not attempt to explain how these federal benefits increase their fiscal burdens or otherwise cause them any concrete harm; nor can they, since such benefits actually decrease these burdens.

¹⁹ The operative complaint states that “[o]ther States besides Texas have similar financial injuries caused by DACA,” First Am. Compl. ¶ 236, and have suffered an “institutional injury,” id. ¶¶ 248-251, but plaintiffs do not identify those injuries or demonstrate that they are irreparable.

Plaintiffs likewise cannot show any injury from executive measures that they characterize (Br. 10) as “incentiviz[ing]” undocumented persons—including DACA grantees—to remain in the country. That characterization rests on a mistaken assumption that DACA grantees are individuals “who would not remain in the country” (Br. 41) but for DACA. As explained above, however, DACA grantees are distinctly unlikely to be removed or to depart voluntarily from the United States. See supra at 15. Plaintiffs accordingly are not injured by grants of work authorization or other Executive actions to address the pragmatic and humanitarian concerns posed by grantees’ continued presence.

Finally, there is no merit to plaintiffs’ argument that they possess per se standing to challenge DACA because it is a federal policy of discretionary forbearance in a field where state powers are preempted. See Br. 15-16 (arguing that plaintiffs possess “abdication standing”). As the Supreme Court explained in Massachusetts v. EPA, a plaintiff challenging a federal act of forbearance must still satisfy Article III by demonstrating cognizable harm that is traceable to the forbearance, which plaintiffs here cannot do. See 549 U.S. 497, 521-23 (2007). And in any event, the Supreme Court has recognized that granting deferred action is not the abdication of a duty, but a “commendable exercise in administrative discretion.” See American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Comm., 525 U.S. at 483-84. As the federal government has explained elsewhere, DHS lacks the resources to remove even five percent of the undocumented population in a given year. See U.S. Br. 4, Texas (U.S.) (AA 37). Accordingly, declining to pursue enforcement against undocumented persons who pose little threat to the Nation’s safety and security, and who have deep ties to this country—in order to focus limited resources on more urgent priorities—is a classic exercise of prosecutorial discretion, not an abdication of the Executive's statutory responsibilities to enforce the law. Indeed, DHS deported record numbers of undocumented persons while the DACA policy was in effect. (See AA 310-314.)

3. Plaintiffs' nearly six-year delay in seeking an injunction against DACA reinforces their lack of irreparable injury from that policy.

Further undermining plaintiffs' claims of irreparable injury is their remarkable delay in bringing this challenge. A "party requesting a preliminary injunction must generally show reasonable diligence." Benisek v. Lamone, 585 U.S. ___, 138 S. Ct. 1942, 1944 (2018) (per curiam). Here, plaintiffs did not sue when the federal government implemented DACA in 2012. Nor did plaintiffs challenge DACA in 2015, when they sued to enjoin DAPA. Instead, they waited another three years before filing this lawsuit—a total delay of nearly six years.

That long delay alone belies any claim that plaintiffs need a preliminary injunction to prevent irreparable harm. As the Fifth Circuit has explained, injunctive relief is inappropriate where, as here, a plaintiff has waited "nearly six years to request injunctive relief, strongly implying that delay" in the resolution of the matter "was not causing irreparable harm." Dillard v. Security Pac. Corp., 85 F.3d 621, 1996 WL 254971, at *4 (5th Cir. 1996) (per curiam) (table decision) (AA 34). For similar reasons, the Supreme Court recently affirmed the denial of a preliminary injunction based primarily on the fact that the plaintiffs there "did not move for a preliminary injunction in the District Court until six years" after the action that they challenged. Benisek, 138 S. Ct. at 1944; see also Quince Orchard Valley Citizens Ass'n v. Hodel, 872 F.2d 75, 80 (4th Cir. 1989); Lydo Enters. v. City of Las Vegas, 745 F.2d 1211, 1213-14 (9th Cir. 1984). The same reasoning applies here.

To the extent plaintiffs claim an urgent need for injunctive relief due to the preliminary injunctions issued in Regents and Batalla Vidal (see Br. 44), those injunctions do not explain why plaintiffs failed to bring this suit for the half-decade between the announcement of DACA in 2012 and the announced rescission of DACA last year. Moreover, any argument that this Court must now issue a preliminary injunction to avoid the consequences of other federal injunctions is an inappropriate collateral attack on the orders of coordinate courts. See infra Point II.

C. The Balance of the Equities and the Public Interest Favor Denying Plaintiffs’ Requested Injunction.

As discussed above (at 14-19), plaintiffs’ asserted harms are foreclosed by precedent, not attributable to DACA, or wholly unsupported by record evidence. In contrast, terminating DACA would devastate the grantees who have structured their lives around the policy, while also harming the communities, employers, and educational institutions that have come to depend on the contributions of those grantees.

Whereas DAPA had yet to be implemented at the time it was challenged in Texas v. United States, DACA has been in effect for nearly six years. During that time, nearly 800,000 grantees have sought and received deferred action and benefits such as work authorization. Batalla Vidal, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 407. Those individuals have “come out of the shadows” and taken on important roles in communities across the country, to the benefit of their families, employers, the institutions with which they are associated, and the States in which they reside. See id. at 435.

A preliminary injunction would thus injure not only hundreds of thousands of DACA grantees, but also countless other persons and entities who have benefited from DACA. Ending DACA would cause “approximately 1,400 DACA recipients” to “lose deferred action each work day” and become “legally unemployable in this country.” Id. at 434. That would swiftly lead to “profound and irreversible economic and social implications.” Id. at 435; see also Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1045 (discussing degree to which DACA grantees have “planned their lives according to the dictates of DACA”).

The amici States in particular would suffer a variety of distinct harms, as two district courts have already concluded. See Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1046-47; Batalla Vidal, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 434-35. The loss of work authorization by DACA grantees would deprive the amici States of highly qualified employees, including faculty at state universities, healthcare workers, information technology specialists, and public safety officers. (AA 73-79, 133-135, 143, 146, 208-210, 247-250, 276-278, 337-343.) State-run educational institutions would lose students and revenue, hindering their ability to promote critical programming. (AA 80-82, 148-152, 199-203, 216-231, 243-250, 25-267, 276-278.) And state and local governments would lose out on the hundreds of millions of dollars in state and local taxes that DACA grantees pay each year. (AA 204-207, 320-328.)

Enjoining DACA would undermine other critical public interests as well. For example, it would place “tremendous burdens on the [amici States’] public health systems” as grantees (and the family members they support) lose their employer-sponsored health coverage. Batalla Vidal, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 434. (See also AA 232-238, 251-270.) DACA grantees who forgo medical care for fear of being reported to immigration authorities will create public health risks. (AA 211-215, 232-234.) The U.S.-citizen children of DACA grantees may be placed into state custody and foster care if their parents cannot remain legally in the United States, thereby burdening the amici States’ child welfare systems. (See AA 84-87, 112-116, 239-242.) Enjoining DACA would also harm public safety because persons who are facing the threat of removal are less likely to report violence, abuse, crimes or other harms to the community. (AA 89, 117-118, 121, 126-127, 333-336, 340-354.)

The individual and institutional harms flowing from an injunction against DACA would reverberate nationwide. For example, large numbers of grantees work in the private sector, including as entrepreneurs and members of crucial industries. (See AA 154-157, 284-290.) Without DACA, GDP will be $460.3 billion less over the next decade, with Social Security and Medicare tax receipts dropping $24.6 billion. (AA 158-159, 290.)

These harms far outweigh any purported harm to the plaintiff States. Indeed, as noted above (at 14-16), DACA helps the plaintiff States and their residents by ameliorating labor-market distortions and other potential burdens associated with the presence in the United States of a class of undocumented aliens who are exceptionally unlikely to leave or be removed. In sum, the balance of the equities and the public interest weigh heavily against a preliminary injunction.

Finally, plaintiffs are incorrect in contending (Br. 44) that DACA did not create any cognizable reliance interests, such that this court may disregard the massive individual and societal disruptions that would flow from enjoining DACA. A government policy or position can create legitimate reliance interests even where the government may have the power to revoke it. See, e.g., FCC v. Fox Television Stations, Inc., 556 U.S. 502, 515-16 (2009).

POINT II

THE CONFLICT BETWEEN PLAINTIFFS' PROPOSED PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION AND TWO EXISTING PRELIMINARY INJUNCTIONS ALSO WARRANTS DENIAL OF PLAINTIFFS' REQUESTED RELIEF

Plaintiffs seek a preliminary injunction “that prevents the federal government from implementing [DACA] by issuing or renewing DACA permits.” Br. 4. Such relief would unavoidably conflict with existing preliminary injunctions issued by courts in the Northern District of California and the Eastern District of New York.²⁰ Those courts have rejected exactly the same arguments plaintiffs press here regarding DACA’s legality. Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1037-43; Batalla Vidal, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 425-27. And they have found that if DACA is terminated, the plaintiffs in the suits before them—including amici States—will suffer “staggering” and “irreversible” economic and social harms. Batalla Vidal, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 434-35; see also Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1046-47. Accordingly, to fully protect the interests of the Regents and Batalla Vidal state plaintiffs, those courts have entered preliminary injunctions requiring the federal government “to maintain the DACA program on a nationwide basis . . . including allowing DACA enrollees to renew their enrollments,” subject to limited exceptions. Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1048; see also Batalla Vidal, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 437. As those courts have observed, no “narrower injunction” would be capable of preventing the irreparable harms “extensively documented” by the Regents and Batalla Vidal state plaintiffs. Batalla Vidal, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 437-38; see also Regents, 279 F. Supp. 3d at 1049.

Under these circumstances, granting plaintiffs’ requested preliminary relief would cause confusion and violate norms of comity and sound judicial administration. District courts must “exercise care to avoid interference with each other’s affairs.” West Gulf Maritime Ass’n v. ILA Deep Sea Local 24, 751 F.2d 721, 728 (5th Cir. 1985). Where a district court is confronted with a suit that is “likel[y]” to “substantially overlap” with a suit previously filed in another district court, “considerations of comity and orderly administration of justice demand” that the second court decline to exercise jurisdiction. Mann Mfg., Inc. v. Hortex, Inc., 439 F.2d 403, 408 (5th Cir. 1971)

²⁰ See also NAACP v. Trump, 298 F. Supp. 3d 209 (D.D.C. 2018) (vacating DACA’s rescission, but staying vacatur for 90 days).

(quotation marks omitted).²¹ These considerations control regardless of whether the overlapping suits are “identical” in substance, id. at 408 n.6, or involve the exact same parties, Save Power, 121 F.3d at 951.

The need to defer is especially acute where a district court is asked to issue an injunction that would directly conflict with another court’s outstanding injunction. See West Gulf, 751 F.2d at 728-32 (issuance of conflicting injunction is an abuse of discretion); Mann, 439 F.2d at 407-08 (same). Such injunctions transgress norms of judicial comity and perpetrate “a grave disservice to the public interest in the orderly administration of justice.” Feller v. Brock, 802 F.2d 722, 727 (4th Cir. 1986).

The relief requested here would squarely conflict with the Batalla Vidal and Regents injunctions that are now being reviewed by the federal appellate courts.²² Those injunctions require the federal government to accept and process requests for renewal of DACA status; plaintiffs’ requested injunction would forbid it. Indeed, plaintiffs admit that they brought this lawsuit as a calculated attempt to collaterally attack the Batalla Vidal and Regents injunctions. First Am. Compl. ¶ 208; see Br. 44. But even if those injunctions were wrongly issued, as plaintiffs claim, the appellate courts reviewing the injunctions are the appropriate bodies to rectify any legal errors. Fifth Circuit precedent strongly counsels against the entry of a conflicting injunction in these circumstances. See West Gulf, 751 F.2d at 728-32.

²¹ See also Sutter Corp. v. P & P Indus., Inc., 125 F.3d 914, 920 (5th Cir. 1997) (failure to transfer action to court where first-filed action was pending was an abuse of discretion); Save Power Ltd. v. Syntek Fin. Corp., 121 F.3d 947, 952 (5th Cir. 1997) (same); cf. Colorado River Water Conservation Dist. v. United States, 424 U.S. 800, 817 (1976) (noting “the general principle” of “avoid[ing] duplicative litigation . . . between federal district courts”); Mower v. Boyer, 811 S.W.2d 560, 563 n.2 (Tex. 1991) (noting similar “general rule” for intrastate actions).

²² Regents, No. 18-15068 (9th Cir. Mar. 15, 2018), ECF No. 51 (AA 281) (expediting briefing); Batalla Vidal, No. 18-485 (2d Cir. Mar. 8, 2018), ECF No. 62 (AA 68) (same); see also DHS v. Regents of Univ. of California, 138 S. Ct. 1182 (2018) (“assum[ing] that the [Ninth Circuit] will proceed expeditiously to decide the case”). Both appeals are fully briefed. The Ninth Circuit appeal was argued and submitted on May 15, 2018.

CONCLUSION

For all of these reasons, this Court should deny plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction.

Dated: New York, New York
July 21, 2018

Respectfully submitted,

XAVIER BECERRA
Attorney General
State of California

BARBARA D. UNDERWOOD
Attorney General
State of New York

EDWARD C. DUMONT
Solicitor General
MICHAEL J. MONGAN
Deputy Solicitor General
MICHAEL L. NEWMAN
Supervising Deputy Attorney General
JAMES F. ZAHRADKA II
Deputy Attorney General
MAX CARTER-OBERSTONE
Associate Deputy Solicitor General
of Counsel

1300 I St.
Sacramento, CA 95814

By: /s/Andrew W. Amend
ANDREW W. AMEND
Senior Assistant Solicitor General
Attorney in Charge
New York Bar No. 4816716
Southern District of Texas Bar No.:
Admitted pro hac vice

28 Liberty Street, 23rd Floor
New York, NY 10005
Telephone: (212) 416-8022
Facsimile: (212) 416-8962

ANISHA S. DASGUPTA
Deputy Solicitor General
ANDREW W. AMEND
Senior Assistant Solicitor General
DAVID S. FRANKEL
Assistant Solicitor General
of Counsel

(Counsel listing continues on next page.)

GEORGE JEPSEN
Attorney General
State of Connecticut
55 Elm St.
Hartford, CT 06106

MATTHEW P. DENN
Attorney General
State of Delaware
Department of Justice
Carvel State Bldg, 6th Fl.
820 North French St.
Wilmington, DE 19801

RUSSELL A. SUZUKI
Attorney General
State of Hawai'i
425 Queen St.
Honolulu, HI 96813

LISA MADIGAN
Attorney General
State of Illinois
100 W. Randolph St., 12th Fl.
Chicago, IL 60601

THOMAS J. MILLER
Attorney General
State of Iowa
1305 E. Walnut St.
Des Moines, IA 50319

JANET T. MILLS
Attorney General
State of Maine
6 State House Station
Augusta, ME 04333

BRIAN E. FROSH
Attorney General
State of Maryland
200 Saint Paul Pl.
Baltimore, MD 21202

MAURA HEALEY
Attorney General
Commonwealth of Massachusetts
One Ashburton Place
Boston, MA 02108

LORI SWANSON
Attorney General
State of Minnesota
102 State Capitol
75 Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Blvd.
St. Paul, MN 55101

HECTOR BALDERAS
Attorney General
State of New Mexico
408 Galisteo St.
Santa Fe, NM 87501

JOSH STEIN
Attorney General
State of North Carolina
114 W. Edenton St.
Raleigh, NC 27603

ELLEN F. ROSENBLUM
Attorney General
State of Oregon
1162 Court St. N.E.
Salem, OR 97301

JOSH SHAPIRO
Attorney General
Commonwealth of Pennsylvania
16th Fl., Strawberry Sq.
Harrisburg, PA 17120

PETER F. KILMARTIN
Attorney General
State of Rhode Island
150 S. Main St.
Providence, RI 02903

(Counsel listing continues on next page.)

THOMAS J. DONOVAN, JR.
Attorney General
State of Vermont
109 State St.
Montpelier, VT 05609

MARK R. HERRING
Attorney General
Commonwealth of Virginia
202 North Ninth St.
Richmond, VA 23219

ROBERT W. FERGUSON
Attorney General
State of Washington
800 Fifth Ave., Ste. 2000
Seattle, WA 98104

KARL A. RACINE
Attorney General
District of Columbia
One Judiciary Sq.
441 4th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20001